

The Long and Winding Road to Equal Pay

Slower Progress and Substantial Differences Among States Mark the 1990s

Highlights for Working Women in Arkansas

- Working women in Arkansas are farther along the road to equal pay than women in many states; in 2000, Arkansas' working women earned 79.8 percent as much per hour as men, while nationwide women earned only 77.6 percent as much per hour as men. Arkansas ranked 16th among all states in equal pay.
- The rate of progress in closing Arkansas' hourly wage gap was better than average in the 1990s. Arkansas ranked 23rd among all states in progress in closing the hourly wage gap.
- Slower wage growth for men contributed to the closing of the gap—wages for men in Arkansas grew by 8.1 percent over the decade, compared with 16.1 percent wage growth for women.
- At the current rate of change, working women in Arkansas won't have equal pay until 2032. Nationwide, women won't achieve equal pay until after 2050.

One of a series of fact sheets on Equal Pay produced by the AFL-CIO Civil, Human & Women's Rights Department and Public Policy Department. If you would like more information on the AFL-CIO Working Women's Program, please contact Rachna Choudhry at 202-508-6904 or via e-mail at rchoudhr@aflcio.org. Also, please visit the AFL-CIO Working Women website at www.aflcio.org/women.